What will you learn?

The Creating Connections series will help First Nations, Métis, and Inuit students strengthen communication skills through the Aboriginal practice of restorative sharing circles. Participants will engage in open dialogue and share their unique perspective in an environment where communication and community building are encouraged and respected. Both students and guardians will gain a deeper appreciation for communication through the sacred practice of listening. These skills will help students at home, in their social lives, and in their school environment.
